Professor of Psychology, Human Neurogenetics, at San Diego State University

The Department of Psychology in the College of Sciences at San Diego State University invites applications for a tenured faculty position at the full professor level with expertise in Human Neurogenetics. Candidates must hold a Ph.D. in psychology, neuroscience or a related field, and have a strong track record of substantial NIH funding, with forward funding for the next three years. Successful candidates will have made fundamental discoveries within human neurogenetics, investigating the interplay of genetic and environmental influences on cognition, brain, and behavior using a variety of approaches; e.g., neuropsychology, behavioral genetic/twin studies and neuroimaging. Research focus on neurogenetics of psychiatric disorders or aging would complement existing research. Preference will be given to candidates with outstanding research records and national and/or international reputations. The successful candidate will play a key role in the Area of Excellence, whose missions are broadly aligned with research, educational, and service missions of the Psychology Department. This academic position includes teaching and mentoring undergraduate and graduate students within the teacher-scholar model. A history of research mentoring and participation in dissertation committees is highly desirable.
